If you are carrying nursery stock, plants, roots, bulbs, cuttings, or seeds into the United States. . .

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) requires that a phytosanitary certificate of inspection accompany restricted articles, other than certain greenhouse-grown plants or seeds from Canada. Phytosanitary certificates are issued by the plant health officials in the country where the product originates. Check with the vendor to make sure you have the proper paperwork or proof that the item is from an approved facility in Canada!

Items without the proper paperwork will be confiscated and safely destroyed.

For more information, call 1-866-SAFEGUARD and select option #2 or contact the USDA State Plant Health Director nearest you. A list of offices can be found in the phone book or on the Web at <http://www.aphis.usda.gov/travel/aqi.html>.
